

BOYGROOVE

Scheduling conflicts allowed your reviewer to catch only the first 30 minutes of what is being billed as a 90-minute performance. Those were 30 minutes well spent in this hilarious musical spoof of the highs and heartbreaks of life in a boy band. These four young actors from Vancouver can sing, dance, act and joke. They're naughty, campy, clever and funny. Their timing is superb. Their music and dance numbers are far slicker than most fringe acts. They play characters alarmed that their small penises do not match their big egos. These guys are definitely going places. There will be opportunities to see the rest of the show. It continues at SAW Gallery until Thursday. Paul Gessell.
